Christine Voskanova holds MA in Psychology and MA in systemic family therapy and is currently a doctoral student in the Department of Human Development at Virginia Tech. She has been working in the Moscow State Center for Psychological Assistance since 2008 until her arrival to Blacksburg, VA in fall 2013. She was an associate for a USA and UK-based Employee Assistance Programs. Prior in her career, Ms. Voskanova worked in an IT customer support business and was a web-portal editor.

Fred P. Piercy, Ph.D. Professor of Family Therapy Department of Human Development Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University

Dr. Fred Piercy is professor of family therapy in the Marriage and Family Therapy Doctoral Program at Virginia Tech. He is currently the editor of the Journal of Marital and Family Therapy, the largest family therapy journal in the world and the flagship journal of the American Association for Marriage and Family Therapy. Dr. Piercy has written over 175 published journal articles and book chapters, five books, and 43 funded grants. He is the co-editor of Research Methods in Family Therapy (2nd Edition) (with Douglas Sprenkle, Guilford Press, 2005) and Handbook for the Clinical Treatment of Infidelity (with Katherine Hertlein and Joseph Wetchler, Haworth Press, 2005).

Leonard Sturdivant is 2nd year doctoral student in the marriage and family therapy program at Virginia Tech. His dissertation interests are centered around marital reconciliation for couples who have filed for divorce. Also, he is interested in psychotherapeutic weight loss for obese couples and individuals. He is currently working on two grant proposals that will facilitate experiments designed to examine emotional issues surrounding both divorce and weight-loss.

Hsin-Chieh (Jenny) Fang is currently a doctoral student in Marriage and Family Therapy at Virginia Tech University. Her current research area centers on the development of psychotherapeutic treatment program for survivors of sex trafficking. Having lived and worked in North America and various Asian countries over the past two decades, Jenny continues to express an interest in combining therapy with technology in the hope of reaching the unreachable internationally. Jenny obtained an M.S. in Marriage and Family Therapy from Loma Linda University and has worked with children, youths, individuals, couples, families, and groups in a variety of clinical settings. Her clinical interests and experiences center on issues related to parenting education, parent-child relationship, couple communication, trauma recovery, identity restoration, and cultural adaptation.

Wei-Ning Chang, M. Ed. is a doctoral student in the marriage and family therapy program at the Virginia Tech. Her research interests pertain to infidelity and its treatment, cross-cultural studies. She has been researching on cross-cultural research on family therapy training and therapist’s attitude toward infidelity.

Dana Riger earned her Bachelor’s degree in Gender Studies from Indiana University, her Master’s degree in Marriage and Family Therapy from Hofstra University, and she recently joined the doctoral program in Human Development at Virginia Tech. Ms. Riger co-authored a chapter on Internet dating in Effects of the Internet on Social Relationships: Therapeutic Considerations in 2011. Ms. Riger worked as a Senior Consultant at a boutique firm in New York for almost six years prior to coming to Virginia Tech. In that position, she performed investigative due diligence related to the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act (FCPA) and analyzed anti-money laundering provisions in high-risk geographies. Ms. Riger’s main focus was on Portuguese-speaking countries and she conducted research in both English and Portuguese.

Hands Riger, earned her Bachelor’s degree in Gender Studies from Indiana University, her Master’s degree in Marriage and Family Therapy from Hofstra University, and she recently joined the doctoral program in Human Development at Virginia Tech. Ms. Riger co-authored a chapter on Internet dating in Effects of the Internet on Social Relationships: Therapeutic Considerations in 2011. Ms. Riger worked as a Senior Consultant at a boutique firm in New York for almost six years prior to coming to Virginia Tech. In that position, she performed investigative due diligence related to the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act (FCPA) and analyzed anti-money laundering provisions in high-risk geographies. Ms. Riger’s main focus was on Portuguese-speaking countries and she conducted research in both English and Portuguese.

Family And Technology Study Team

Christine Voskanova holds MA in Psychology and MA in systemic family therapy and is currently a doctoral student in the Department of Human Development at Virginia Tech. She has been working in the Moscow State Center for Psychological Assistance since 2008 until her arrival to Blacksburg, VA in fall 2013. She was an associate for a USA and UK-based Employee Assistance Programs. Prior in her career, Ms. Voskanova worked in an IT customer support business and was a web-portal editor.